

Kris Genovese, Researcher, *Center for Research on Multinational Corporations (SOMO)

Kris Genovese is a senior researcher at SOMO where she coordinates the Human Rights & Grievance Mechanism Programme. She also serves as co-coordinator of OECD Watch. Since 2007, Ms. Genovese has been providing legal support to sugarcane workers in Nicaragua affected by chronic kidney disease to help determine the cause of the epidemic and to obtain improved health and social services. She has also worked with mining-affected communities in Colombia, Guatemala and Bolivia. Prior to joining SOMO, Ms. Genovese was the director of the People, Land, and Resources Program at the Center for International Environmental Law in Washington, D.C. Prior to joining CIEL in June 2007, she was International Counsel at Defenders of Wildlife where she focused on the implementation and enforcement of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora (CITES). In particular, she lobbied CITES parties to address the illegal and unsustainable logging of mahogany in Peru. She also led a campaign to improve environmental protections in the U.S.-Peru Free Trade Agreement, resulting in an Annex on Forest Sector Governance and the incorporation of a requirement to implement and enforce obligations under several multilateral environmental agreements.
