

Telebriefing:
Crisis in Ukraine: A Role for Human Rights Funders
January 14, 2014

BIOGRAPHIES OF SPEAKERS

Ross Maclaren is Program Officer for the Western Former Soviet Union (including Russia, Ukraine, Moldova, and Belarus) at the Charles Stewart Mott Foundation. Previously, Mr. Maclaren worked for a range of grantmaking organizations in Central and Eastern Europe and the former Soviet Union, including the Institute for Sustainable Communities (ISC), based in Montpelier, Vermont, where he was director of its Russian Far East office in Khabarovsk. Prior to joining ISC, he was regional director for ISAR-Central Asia (Institute for Social Action and Renewal in Eurasia), a grantmaking organization located in Almaty, Kazakhstan working with grassroots organizations located throughout Central Asia. He also worked for Charity Know How (at the time a division of the Charities Aid Foundation) supporting third sector development in Romania and Ukraine. Mr. Maclaren holds a bachelor's degree in Russian and East European Studies from the University of Toronto and a master's degree in Central/East European and Russian Area Studies from Carleton University in Ottawa.

Natalia Karbowska has been working in the area of civil society development and women's rights since 1997. First, she served as Women's Program Director at the Open Society Institute (Soros Foundation) in Ukraine, and then worked as the Director of Women's Economic Empowerment Project at Winrock International. Presently, she is deputy director of the Healthy Women of Ukraine Program. Natalia is a Board Chair of the Ukrainian Women's Fund, the only women's fund in Ukraine. Under her leadership, the Fund has provided more than 1.5 million USD in grants to women's rights NGOs in Ukraine and neighboring countries Moldova and Belarus. Natalia holds a master's degree in Economics, and is a member of the Gender Advisory Council of the Ministry of Social Policy of Ukraine, and board member of the International Gender Policy Network.