COUNTERING HATRED - SUPPORTING TOLERANCE IN EUROPE:

Ariadne the European Human Rights Funders Network invites grant-makers, donors and funders to a one-day knowledge and networking event on the growing problems facing Europe in countering hatred on grounds of race, religion and ethnicity. A number of philanthropists and grant-makers are currently considering policies and developing programmes to tackle this area, this day comes to help them in this work. It is being supported by Open Society Foundations, Unbound Philanthropy, Barrow Cadbury Trust and the Sigrid Rausing Trust

A specially commissioned overview of this problem, across Europe, will be presented. We will hear from different actors and grant-makers across Europe, consider ways for donors to intervene effectively and appropriately to leverage available funds, present new research on the roots of tolerance and levels of tolerance in different countries in Europe, and also consider the strength of the Counter-Jihad movement, globally and the difficulties in monitoring it.

The seminar is an opportunity for donors and grant-makers to gather knowledge, to discuss approaches amongst others working in the same field and to raise problems and solutions, openly, free from the pressures of grant-seeking. It will be followed by a networking dinner in Rotterdam.

There will be a charge of €100 to register for the day. This is highly subsidised to enable as many funders and donors as possible to take part. On registration we will also try to collect brief data on existing grants by foundations and donors attending which will be simply collated in advance of the event.

A LINK to register for this day will be posted shortly, please e-mail lisa.hashemi@ariadne-network.eu if you would like to receive the link or if you would like more information. Ariadne members will receive information through the Portal and Ariadne's Thread.
